GOSPEL TRUTH

Dear Friends,

The Lord is doing extraordinary things through Andrew Wommack Ministries and Charis Bible College. I could spend hours sharing with you and not even scratch the surface. This magazine will try to fill you in on some of the highlights. These testimonies and pictures will give you a sense of the many wonderful things the Lord has done.

All that is happening today is really the result of seeking the Lord forty five years ago to know His will for my life. I was in my first year of college, just going through the motions but in my heart, I was crying out to the Lord to show me His purpose for my life and on March 23, 1968, God showed up BIG TIME.

The last forty five years have been a process of walking through God's good, acceptable, and perfect will for my life. It certainly hasn't been easy, but it's been awesome! I wouldn't trade what the Lord has done for me for any other life. The Lord has been very good to Jamie and me.

My main article in this magazine is on how you can find God's will for your life. It doesn't come automatically or by fate. If you don't pursue God's best, it won't happen and there is no way you can pursue God's will if you don't know what it is. As Paul told the Ephesians, you should not be ignorant but understand what the will of the Lord is (Ephesians 5:17). You can know God's will for your life. In fact, you must know God's will for your life in order to fulfil it.

I've just released a new book entitled How to Find, Follow, and Fulfil God's Will. This is a combination of three separate but related teachings into one book. I believe this is an absolute necessity for all who want to fulfil their destinies. I guarantee you, this will bless your life. We also have three separate study guides to go along with this new book, as well as the three original CD albums and DVD albums.

Lastly, check out the update on our construction at The Sanctuary in Woodland Park, Colorado. Praise the Lord, He has led me to raise up a first-rate Bible college to impact the world, and we are well on our way to accomplishing that. Thanks to everyone who is a part of what the Lord started in my life forty five years ago. I believe the best is yet to come for us and for you.

You are blessed,

Andrew and Jamie

HOW TO FIND, FOLLOW, AND FULFIL God's Will

by Andrew Wommack

Are you fulfilling your call? Do you even know what God has ordained for your life? If not, you're certainly not alone. I once ministered at a Gospel Truth Seminar in Orlando, Florida, on the subject of finding God's will. Two thirds of the audience rose when I asked for those to stand who didn't know if they were walking in God's will. How can believers ever expect to build God's kingdom if they don't know their part?

The first thing is to realise that the Lord has a specific and unique plan for you. He's had this plan in mind before you were even born.

Psalm 139:15-16 says,

My frame was not hidden from you when I was made in the secret place. When I was woven together in the depths of the earth, [16] your eyes saw my unformed body. All the days ordained for me were written in your book before one of them came to be. (New International Version 1984)

You are not a mistake going somewhere to happen. You haven't been placed on this earth by chance. Where and when you were born, the parents God gave you, your personality, and everything else about you was orchestrated by God for a specific purpose. But this doesn't mean God's will is automatically going to come to pass in your life. It won't. God's will doesn't always come to pass. Take salvation, for instance.

Where and when you were born, the parents God gave you, your personality, and everything else about you was orchestrated by God for a specific purpose.

Second Peter 3:9 tells us,

The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

It is clear from this scripture that God wants everyone to come to repentance and be saved, yet we know that not everyone does. God also wants everyone healed (3 John 2), yet people still live with sickness in their bodies. Likewise, God wants everyone to find and walk in the purpose He has ordained for them, yet not everyone will. But that's not God's fault.

Once you realise you are the one responsible for discovering God's will, the next step is to start seeking Him for it. He's not hiding His will from you, but you are going to have to do some seeking to find it.

You are the one responsible for discovering God's will.

Jeremiah 29:12-13 tell us how we need to seek God:

Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. [13] And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart.

Notice the emphasis on seeking with all your heart. As long as you can live without knowing God's will for your life, you will. But when you seek with all your heart, you will find His will (Matthew 7:7).

When I was a senior in high school, I was faced with having to know what God's will for my life was. I needed to know if I was supposed to go to college, or what path God wanted me to take. I asked people in my church how to find God's will. Nobody could tell me what to do.

I decided to start reading the Bible. I figured God's Word could give me the knowledge I needed, so I stayed up until two or three o'clock every night, reading. Even though I ended up reading through the Bible two or three times during my senior year, I still didn't have any specific direction from the Lord. Then, all of a sudden, one passage of Scripture – Romans 12:1b-2 – came alive to me:

Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. [2] And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God.

For the next four months, I meditated on those scriptures. It was shortly after that when I had my life changing encounter with God. As a result of that encounter, I began to see that God had called me to be a full-time minister. I don't think it was any accident that He showed up in such a miraculous way in my life at that time. It was because I had been diligently seeking Him, wanting to know the path He had for me.

One mistake people often make in seeking God's purpose is that they assume that whatever they're good at in the natural must be what God wants them to do. So, if they're naturally good at public speaking, they figure that God must have called them to a speaking ministry of some sort. I don't believe this is always true. It certainly wasn't true in my case. I was scared stiff of speaking in front of people.

One mistake people often make in seeking God's purpose is that they assume that whatever they're good at in the natural must be what God wants them to do.

God called me to do what is beyond my natural ability so that I would have to rely on Him to get it done. That's why God's will may have nothing to do with your natural gifts. If you can do something yourself, naturally, you wouldn't need God's empowerment. Sometimes people's talents may be an indication of what God's will is, but many have gifts and talents they don't even know exist.

Paul said that God had separated him from his mother's womb and called him by His grace (Galatians 1:15). God purposed for Paul to be a minister of the Gospel before he was ever born. He didn't look at Paul's talents once he grew up and then decided He could use him. His life had been predestined, just as yours is. So, if you only look at what you're good at to determine your purpose, you may totally miss it.

God's perfect will is definitely worth finding. Supernatural peace and joy come when you're in the centre of His will, and God's blessing and anointing will always be on your work when you are doing what He's called you to do.

Supernatural peace and joy come when you're in the centre of His will.

Following God's Will...

Did you know that finding God's will is not enough? It's only the first step. Some people get a revelation of God's general will for their lives but then stop seeking Him for direction on how to carry it out. Knowing God's will is critical, but after that, you must learn how to follow His will and cooperate with Him to bring it to pass.

People may stumble across God's will but then decide they can carry it out in their own strength. They think they have God's plan all figured out, and they don't take time to discover how He wants to accomplish His will through them.

Another problem is that people often won't take time to prepare for God's will to be fulfilled. They are moved by the need that's around them, and they feel pressured into hurrying to bring God's plan to pass. You can't speed up the things of God, but you can certainly delay them.

Moses found this out the hard way and ended up delaying God's plan by thirty years. He took matters into his own hands and killed an Egyptian, thereby totally missing God's plan and timing for the Israelites' deliverance. It ended up costing Moses forty years in the wilderness, which was not God's original plan.

Throughout the Bible, we see examples of God preparing His people for the ministry He called them to. David waited thirteen years from the time he was anointed to be king, until he actually became king. Moses had to wait ten years. Paul had to wait fourteen. And then there was Abraham, who had to wait twenty five years, until he was 100!

God always calls you to do something totally beyond your own ability because He wants you to depend on Him. It's important that you wait and do things His way and in His timing, not only for yourself, but also for those He has called you to reach.

God always calls you to do something totally beyond your own ability because He wants you to depend on Him. It's important that you wait and do things His way and in His timing....

Fulfilling God's Will...

Many Christians will master the first step of finding God's will for their lives and then follow His will by continually seeking Him for direction, but once God actually gives them specific steps on how to walk in His will, they come up with a million excuses as to why they can't do it.

I see this over and over again with prospective Bible college students. So many have told me that they know God wanted them to come to our college years ago, but for whatever reason – parents, children, pets, you name it – they didn't come. The truth is, if you wait for everything in your life to line up perfectly before you obey God, you never will.

If God has told you to do something, don't try to figure out how it will work or where the provision will come from. God told Elijah to go to a certain place and that He would provide for him when he got there. (I have a teaching on this called, "A Place Called There.") Elijah had to act in faith and go to the brook if he wanted to see God's provision.

You will miss a lot if you don't obey God. If you want to finish your race strong and do all that He has planned for you, you must obey the steps He gives you. There are no shortcuts! Now God will still love you – you will still be His child, you will still make it into heaven, and He will still use you in His kingdom – but you won't fulfil His perfect will for your life.

In order to walk in the fullness of what God has for you – the good of the land – you must obey all He tells you to do. Many of you have something that God has impressed on your hearts to do, and for whatever reason, you just haven't done it. Stop making excuses and get started! If you don't know exactly how to do it, pray and ask God to give you wisdom (James 1:5-8).

If you feel dissatisfied or unsettled with your life and are tired of just going to work, coming home, watching television, going to bed, and getting up and doing it all over again, it may be God prompting you to start seeking out His perfect will. Don't wait another day to begin the search for God's will in your life.

To help you in this effort, I have released a new book: How to Find, Follow, and Fulfil God's Will, accompanied by three study guides. I also have a series of three, five-part teachings: How to Find God's Will, How to Follow God's Will, and How to Fulfil God's Will. I believe this teaching will literally change your life if you apply these principles. GT

HEALING JOURNEY

THE NEW NORMAL: FROM AUTISM TO Awesome

It was a perfect Monday morning when Christopher McDermott held his newborn son, Timothy, for the very first time. Although the two had met only moments before, a bond of love was already forming. Christopher wanted only the best for his son, and at that moment, he couldn't imagine anything that would keep him from it.

But any thoughts Christopher had of Timothy being a "perfect" baby quickly faded when he discovered that his child was completely inconsolable. "He would scream and scream as though he was in pain, but the doctors couldn't find anything wrong with him," remembers Christopher's wife, Deborah. As new parents, Christopher and Deborah didn't know what to expect from a newborn, so they just assumed that most kids were like Timothy.

Aside from his fussiness, Timothy seemed to the McDermotts to be perfectly normal and happy – at least for his first few years. "When Timothy got older, we realised that he wasn't a happy boy," says Deborah. "He was very nervous and anxious all the time." Problems escalated when Timothy was about nine. He had been home schooled up to that point because the McDermotts were afraid he would be diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder if he was sent to school. "He couldn't even sit still to eat," recalls Deborah. "He would run around the table, take a mouthful, then run around the table again."

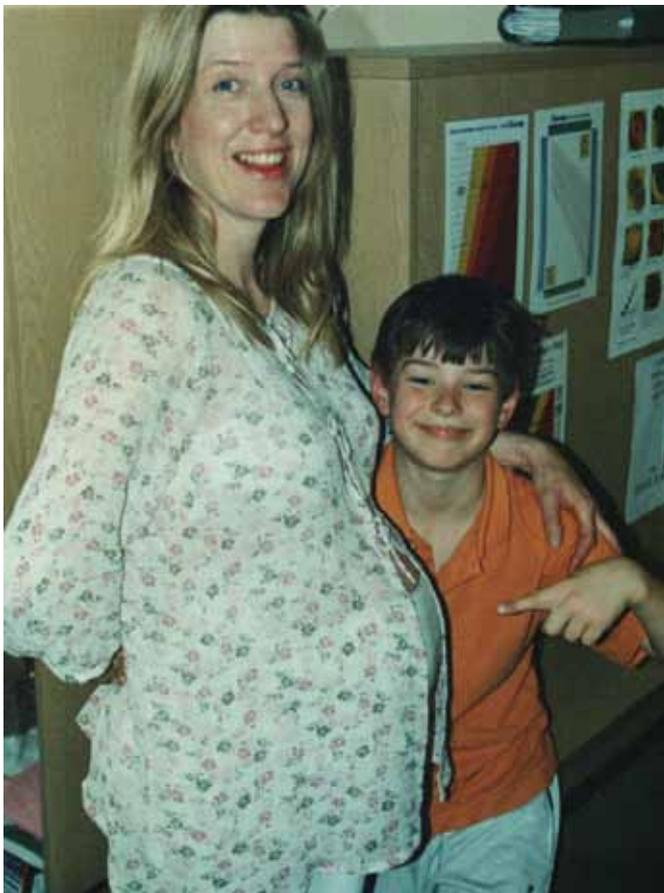

One of the McDermotts' greatest fears was that Timothy would grow up alone. They were afraid for when he grew older, when they would no longer be there to protect or care for him. Christopher and Deborah decided it would be good for Timothy to have a sibling. Even Timothy thought that having a little brother was a great idea – until he had one.

Baby James, like Timothy, proved to be a difficult baby yet, unlike Timothy, he was happy: "We suddenly realised how different it was to have a child who was bubbly and would look people in the eye," says Christopher.

But Deborah knew she wouldn't be able to continue to home school Timothy and take care of James as well. Educating Timothy was very cumbersome, as each week, Deborah felt as though she had to start completely over with what she had just taught him the week before. "But yet," says Deborah, "Timothy had the ability to remember things he'd learned from his video or computer games.... In fact, he would discover mistakes that the Star Wars games made with regard to the languages on the different planets. He got very indignant that they were wrong.... everything had to be just so with him.”

Matters became worse for Timothy after James arrived, as his parents had less time to devote to him. The McDermotts enrolled him in a small, specialized school, which they thought could help him. Instead, it only magnified his problems. Timothy began having nightmares about drowning, he lost weight, and he stopped growing. He then started having “storms,” where insignificant issues would cause him to fall to pieces.

Deborah (pregnant with James) and Timothy

These storms led him into dangerous behaviour, such as head butting doors or the floor, or punching himself as a result of distress. Being in public became highly stressful for Timothy, and he was very particular about his food and how it was served. He also had no coordination, which caused simple things like writing to be a major challenge. The McDermotts had no choice but to take Timothy out of school and seek professional help.

While Timothy’s condition deteriorated, James began having his own problems when he was about eighteen months old: “James always had a few odd things [about him], but not enough to cause concern,” recalls Deborah. “But then he stopped talking and communicating, and then he stopped wanting people to look at him...he became bothered with lights and then he stopped eating his food, if it wasn’t the perfect texture and just right.”

At the suggestion of Timothy’s therapist, the McDermotts also had James evaluated. He was diagnosed as having developmental delays and behavioural issues, along with obvious impairments that are on the autistic spectrum. At this point, Timothy had already been diagnosed with Asperger’s syndrome, and now James had the possibility of the same diagnosis. Christopher and Deborah came face to face with the reality that, against all odds, they had two children with serious disabilities.

Deborah had her own challenges to confront during this time as well. Christopher took a new job, which had him travelling quite often, and because she focused on her kids 24/7, she had no circle of friends or any support system in place. She had to walk through this dark valley alone. But Deborah soon discovered that it is during her darkest moments that God’s love and grace shine the brightest.

“One day when I was really down, I turned on Christian programming on television,” recalls Deborah. “Mothers were talking about their kids and proudly showing off their pictures.... and it just hit me, what I was really experiencing with my own family. I felt so alone and deserted. I yelled out to God, ‘Why don’t You help us?’ I had been asking Him to help for years and I was angry. I believed it was God’s fault because I had been taught that He was sovereign. I said, ‘I love my boys so much, and You’re supposed to love them more than me....’ I told Him, ‘I would die for my boys.’ He said, ‘I already did.’ I was so stunned that I just shut up.”

Deborah stared into the fireplace as she continued her conversation with God: “You did die, but what difference does it make in our situation?” God simply replied, “I’ll heal your sons.” Deborah’s faith leapt, and in her heart, she immediately believed that her sons would be okay. “I remember thinking, Yes, He’ll heal them. That’s why He died, so He could heal them.” As Deborah continued to unconsciously gaze at the flickering flames, God melted away her tears, her pain and years’ worth of anxiety. From that moment, the terror that had stalked her day and night completely vanished.

Although Deborah clung to God’s words, she still needed help. One day as she was praying, her mother, who lives several hours away, phoned to tell her to turn on the Gospel Truth. She immediately tuned in and watched the story of Hannah Terradez, whom God miraculously healed of a life-threatening disease. “As I watched that day, faith rose inside me,” recalls Deborah. “I thought, Yes, Andrew’s talking about my God!” Christopher looked up Andrew Wommack Ministries (AWM) on the internet and, to the McDermotts’ surprise, discovered that Andrew would be in Walsall – a two hour drive away – in two weeks.

Over the next couple of days, Deborah and Christopher diligently researched both AWM and Hannah. They were blessed and amazed by what they learned, and knew in their hearts that this was God’s answer to their cry for help. But they also knew that it would take a miracle just to get to Walsall.

Timothy couldn’t last more than fifteen minutes in a car without getting severely nauseous. James had never even been in a car for more than half an hour. Even in that short time, he screamed and cried continuously. Staying in a hotel would present a whole new set of challenges that came with being away from routine and familiar surroundings, but the McDermotts knew they had to get to the meeting.

They began watching Andrew every day, bought as many books as possible, and downloaded teachings from www.awmi.net. Their faith grew to believe God for what He said they already had. Deborah’s next step was to call Andrew Wommack Ministries – Europe and alert them to their situation. “The woman I spoke with asked me, ‘What can you believe for?’ I told her, ‘I think we can get there, but I’m not sure I can exercise my faith enough to get into the building.’ She said, ‘If you can’t get them out of the car, we’ll send a prayer team to you.’ Then she prayed in a way that I had never heard before. She was authoritative and thanked God that it was already done. I hung up and thought, This is really going to happen.”

The two weeks leading up to the trip tested the McDermotts’ faith to its limits. Timothy cried with anxiety whenever the trip was mentioned, and when the day came to go, he physically fought not to get into the car. But Deborah recited to God His promise and refused to back down. As the family drove, both boys settled in and became calm – even cheerful. The miraculous was already happening.

As an additional step of faith, once the McDermotts arrived at their hotel, they ate next door at the same KFC where Hannah ate, right after God healed her. Both boys – who, for their entire lives, were not only severely restricted with what they ate but also had to have their food prepared in particular ways, ate their fill of popcorn chicken and fries. God continued to answer the family’s prayers with one miracle after another to prove He was fully in control of their situation.

Timothy and Christopher

During a break at the meeting, Deborah and Christopher waited in line with their sons so Andrew could pray for them. The line was long, and before their turn came, Andrew announced that it was time to return to their seats. Completely deflated, Deborah began weeping. She couldn't leave without Andrew praying for them. Just then, someone grabbed her arm and thrust her right in front of Andrew. That someone was Paul Flanagan, director of Charis Bible College (CBC) West Midlands.

"Deborah quickly told Andrew our situation," says Christopher, "and without hesitation, he simply rebuked autism and commanded healing into our boys. Then he blessed us as a family and thanked God that we would fulfil God's plan for our lives. He then said something we will never forget: He told us that we were now the parents of normal, healthy children."

"I remember hearing that as if the whole world went quiet, and it was just these words hanging there," adds Deborah. "For me, it was Jesus talking to me, and it was a promise. I knew Andrew was right. We left and went to McDonald's, where the boys ate like I've never seen them eat before."

From the first day the McDermotts arrived home, the transformation they witnessed in James and Timothy was remarkable. That night, the entire family experienced their first night of peaceful sleep since the day James was born, five years earlier.

Deborah and Christopher watched in awe of God's power as James continued to sleep through the night, month after month and year after year. The same miraculous change occurred in Timothy. "It was as if Timothy was covered in scales of autism," says Christopher, "and over time, those scales were peeled away to reveal the amazing boy that he is today."

Deborah attributes the miraculous changes in her boys to God's word of healing that He spoke to her and to Andrew's teaching, which helped her rightly understand God's will for healing and also kept her faith strong during times of doubt. "When I watched Andrew, he seemed to be talking about the God that I knew...not the other one that everyone else seems to talk about," explains Deborah. "I was confused about a lot of other teachings regarding faith and the power of words and understanding the difference between works and grace.

Deborah and James

"I felt that God led me to Andrew's teachings so He could teach me what I needed to know. I listened only to Andrew for nearly six months, and in that time, my questions were answered. The teachings that helped me most were Spirit, Soul & Body, You've Already Got It!, and God Wants You Well. Through these, I finally understood how I had been wrongly taught about the sovereignty of God." Deborah realises that if she had continued believing incorrectly, her boys would not be healed today, because she would have thought that their condition was God's will for them.

Once Timothy and James were healed, the McDermotts took them both back to their psychologists for another evaluation. The new diagnosis is that Timothy is a "neurodevelopmentally typical young man, and the label of Asperger's syndrome is not applicable." He was discharged from the doctor's care. Likewise, James's official report now reads, "...it is clear there has been significant progress over time in all areas associated with the triad of impairment with autism. As a result, the label Autism Spectrum Disorder is no longer appropriate for James and should be removed from any documentation in the future that relates to him.”

Deborah and Timothy have begun the CBC correspondence course together and are hoping to one day attend CBC as full-time students. “From there, we’ll see where the Lord guides us,” says Deborah, “but for now, we are gaining a solid foundation through the correspondence course.”

The McDermotts’ present reality and hopes for the future are so far removed from how life used to be when Timothy and James were young children. Deborah remembers when she could only imagine a life of normalcy: “I used to dream about all four of us going out to dinner and not worrying about anything. . . just like a normal family. I used to dream about going to the cinema and eating popcorn and watching a movie together. We had never done these things before, but, just as I had imagined, we went to the cinema and we bought the popcorn. We are a normal family, and I am the mother of normal, healthy children – just like Andrew said.” You can watch a video of this testimony at: www.awmi.net/extra/healing/mcdermott. GT

Raped at gunpoint, a young, scared, and pregnant Connie Weiskopf succumbed to pro-abortion counselling. Pregnant again by a live-in boyfriend, she endured a second abortion. Then, after years of guilt, she found herself battling breast cancer. It was there that her healing journey really began.

The diagnosis – malignant neoplasm. The tumour grew at an alarming rate and began to metastasize in Mike Hoesch’s body. Mike was confused, discouraged, and convinced that he was not healed, because he didn’t measure up. Then a friend gave him hope.

Debbie found her husband, Alan, lying on the ground. He had experienced a massive stroke. “One-third of his brain is permanently damaged,” said the doctors. “He will never walk, swallow, or speak again.” Yet nine days later, he walked out of the hospital, unaided.

The nurses raced Jamie Scott’s newborn girl to the ICU. X-rays showed that baby Audrey was missing a rib, major arteries, and the left side of her heart. The doctors offered little hope. “I laid my hands on her and commanded her to be whole,” said Jamie. And then the Holy Spirit spoke these words to her heart – “Watch Me work.”

Chronic pain from fibromyalgia was robbing Lance Weldgen of his life. The seventeen prescription medications he was taking had little or no lasting effect. Hope was fading until God arranged a divine encounter with other believers at a coffee shop.

Many Gospel Truth readers probably remember when we shared about the passing of Leland Shores, the former director of Charis Bible College (CBC) Uganda. Because of Leland's unexpected death, we were forced to close the college at the end of 2011. We weren't giving up on the college; we were just waiting for God to bring new directors to reopen it and successfully operate and grow it.

Those directors have been found in Hank and Mary Lenz, who "resurrected" CBC Uganda at the end of January with over 150 students. Hank and Mary were former classmates as well as former employers of Leland's when they owned a Blimpie's sandwich shop in Colorado Springs.

CBC Colorado graduate Dean Crooks and his wife, Linda, had stepped in as the school's interim directors and helped conduct CBC Uganda's first graduation ceremony. But after graduation, classes were put on hold until full-time directors were hired.

Aside from the college, Andrew Wommack Ministries (AWM) has continued to make great headway in Uganda. For the past eight years, Andrew has been broadcasting the Gospel Truth on Lighthouse Television out of Kampala twice a day. This is a 50,000 watt station that was originally erected by the Chinese Communists for Idi Amin to broadcast his propaganda.

Additionally, a bookstore was established over five years ago in downtown Kampala, at the busiest intersection in the city. Nearly 10,000 people walk past that location each day. An average of twenty five people come to the Lord, and many more receive prayer and the baptism of the Holy Spirit every week at the AWM bookstore.

Recently the Lord has opened doors for AWM to expand into one of the remotest areas of Uganda

Kampala city market

The huts are quite tiny. Though some have two levels, the bottom level is only about four feet tall, and the entire hut is only eight feet in diameter. It's not uncommon to have families of eight or ten people living in the bottom

UGANDA – OCTOBER 2012

– the Karamoja region in the northeastern part of the country. There are over one million people living in 5,000 small villages throughout Karamoja.

This entire area is completely isolated and very different from the rest of Uganda. Their isolation is due to a history of extreme violence, as people killed each other because of cattle rustling. In fact, instead of individual houses similar to those found in the rest of Uganda, the people in Karamoja live in circular villages of 200 or so people. For defence, each village is surrounded with huge thorn branches woven into hedges.

The people in the villages of Karamoja still live as their ancestors did a thousand years ago. The grass huts they call home are simply sticks with thatch coverings.

Villages in Karamoja, a view from an aeroplane portion alone! The families have no possessions, except pots for cooking and mats for sleeping. Some of the villagers do not even wear any clothing.

Perhaps the saddest part of the Karamoja existence is the overwhelming malnutrition and widespread water contamination. The people are ranchers and goat herders, but the fighting has killed all the cattle, so now all that remains are very small and thin goats. It is a hopeless situation among the villagers, with their total focus set on trying to find enough food to survive each day. They truly are only a step away from death at any given time.

Spiritual poverty is rampant as well. The Karamojan people have no idea what a Bible is or who Jesus is. Instead, they adhere to the many pagan practices of their ancestors.

But here's the good news: God has been provided an entrance into Uganda – including the remote areas of Karamoja – and His Word is beginning to go forth in powerful ways. Ugandan president, Museveni, recently publicly repented for all his sins as well as those of his nation, and he dedicated Uganda to the Lord. Uganda is in revival, and God has positioned AWM to be a big part of what He's doing there.

Last October, Andrew visited Karamoja with Pastor Francis, who is from southwestern Uganda and among AWM's first group of disciples. Pastor Francis has personally discipled over 300 ministers and, with the help of Andrew Wommack Ministries, teaches the Discipleship Evangelism course on five daily radio stations, reaching thousands.

After seeing the physical and spiritual poverty of the Karamojan people, Andrew knew he had to do something to help them long term. As he shared his heart with Pastor Francis, Andrew learned that after pastoring for twenty-five years, Francis had heard from God that at the beginning of 2013, he was to turn his church over to an associate. The Lord wanted Francis to travel and teach the Discipleship Evangelism course full time. In January 2013, Pastor Francis came to work for Andrew, helping him reach the people of Karamoja.

Francis is now travelling regularly to Karamoja and using Discipleship Evangelism to train approximately one hundred believers. He teaches four or five lessons over a couple of days and then sends the disciples out in groups to show the JESUS film in the native language of the people. This in itself is a huge deal, as most of the people in this area have never seen a movie before. Just showing a movie could draw every person in the entire village to come and watch.

Ministering to people in Lodoi and Moroto

Karamoja natives

As it's a movie about Jesus, they will now have a frame of reference as to who He is and what He did for them. They will finally begin to understand what crucifixion is and why Jesus died for them. Immediately after the film, Pastor Francis's team gives an invitation to receive the Lord. Over the weeks that follow, the new converts will then be disciplined by those who have already received the Discipleship Evangelism training.

In addition to these efforts, CBC Uganda will take their missions trips to the Karamoja region, which will thrust hundreds more labourers into this harvest field. With all these avenues in place, Andrew and Pastor Francis have developed a plan that will allow them to reach all of the villagers in the Karamoja region with the Gospel in three years. Of course, not everyone will receive Jesus, and even fewer will ultimately become disciples, but the Karamoja harvest is still positioned to be quite large.

One of the best parts is that it will only cost about £2,500 per month for the Karamoja project. That amount will pay for Pastor Francis's salary, travel expenses, and the purchase of the JESUS films and generators. Another £10,000 per month is needed to fund CBC Uganda, the Lighthouse Television broadcasts, and the downtown bookstore. For approximately £12,500 per month, AWM can impact tens of millions of people in Uganda in a way that could literally change the nation.

Power of Partnership

BUILDING “THE BARN”

By the time this magazine gets distributed, the walls will be up at The Barn, the floor of the main level poured, and hopefully, the entire basement enclosed so that the plumbing and other infrastructure work can be completed.

It’s been a long road since the initial planning stages were implemented in the building of this first of two structures that comprise The Sanctuary, the new home of Charis Bible College’s (CBC) headquarters in Woodland Park, Colorado. Favourable weather conditions throughout most of the winter have allowed construction crews to make tremendous progress.

By the end of November, the crews were able to accomplish many of the underground structural components of The Barn: pouring footings for the basement, erecting the forms for the basement walls, and continuing the development of the road system necessary to bring in cranes and other equipment. And, by mid-January, the entire basement support structure had been completed.

Building the 90,000 square-foot Barn will allow the CBC Colorado student body to grow to over 1,300 students. Meanwhile, the construction of the second building, which includes a 2,500 seat auditorium and administrative offices, will be underway. When finished, these two buildings will be a combined 220,000 square feet!

For Andrew, The Sanctuary is a dream come true. Once the Lord showed him how he must multiply himself by raising up disciples in order to effectively take the grace message to the nations, his vision has been for the expansion of CBC. Sending out graduates throughout the world, to start expansion schools or to serve as missionaries or other ministers, is the reason for CBC.

When asked about the impact of the Bible colleges, Andrew replied, “There’s nothing else I know of that has the potential of changing entire nations.” By expanding the capacity of the CBC headquarters in Colorado, not only will CBCs all over the world receive more support, but also the growth of new schools will increase tremendously.

“The Sanctuary project has never been about a building for me,” added Andrew. “I’m not doing this to create a legacy. This is about a tool...a tool that enables us to reach people and disciple them in a way I otherwise couldn’t.”

New Numbers

As construction for The Barn got underway, Andrew soon realised that his original cost estimate of $20 million would have to be revised. “We initially projected the entire project cost of both buildings to be around $47 million, with The Barn costing about $20 million,” explained Andrew.

But now it appears that the total cost will be closer to $53 million. This is due to construction add-ons, some of which were required by the city, and others which Andrew decided to do sooner rather than later. For instance, the city required a water loop to be completed on an adjacent property, as well as the addition of a third lane to the entrance road in order to accommodate emergency vehicles. This alone will cost the ministry over $3 million.

Additionally, Andrew learned that by doing some of the work for the second building ahead of time, he would actually save money. Installing electricity for the two buildings at once, for example, saved over $250,000. And he could have decreased the up front amount by $4 million had he not done the excavation for the second building, but it would have cost more to do it later.

“In retrospect, I feel like it was the right thing to do,” said Andrew. “But instead of $20 million for the first phase, as I had thought, and $27 million for the second phase, we now need nearly $33 million for the first phase and $20 million for the second.”

Even with all the added expenses to the first phase, the ministry has over 75 percent of Phase 1 paid for in cash. Andrew is adamant that he’s “committed to building debt free regardless of how long it takes.” But he’s also quick to add, “I believe that the Lord wants us in by the scheduled completion date of November 2013.”

At the time of writing this article, there is still just over $7 million needed to complete The Barn. An average of $500,000 per month has been donated specifically toward this project from our Foundation Builders and one-time gifts.

It won’t take much more to get The Barn completely built and paid for. Andrew asks that people just do what God puts on their hearts to do. “I’m aware that many people are struggling financially now, and there are many other ministries needing support. I really believe with all my heart that I am doing what the Lord has led me to do, and I’m pressing ahead. I’m more convinced than ever that our Bible colleges are one of the most important ways the Lord has given me to make a difference. It’s already happening. We are making a big difference.”

If you would like to give a single gift or become a Foundation Builder partner with AWM to help bring in the remainder of the necessary funding, you may call the Helpline: +44(0)1922 473300 or donate online: www.awme.net. 35 YEARS AND COUNTING: THE FUTURE OF

AWM

For the past thirty five years, since the incorporation of Andrew Wommack Ministries (AWM), the ministry has had quite an amazing history. From its humble official beginning in Lamar, Colorado, in 1978, to the first Gospel Truth radio show in Childress, Texas, to the first Gospel Truth television show in 2000, to the first Gospel Truth Seminar in 2003, to now an incredible new 220,000 square-foot Charis Bible College (CBC) Colorado headquarters, the ministry has seen explosive growth in all areas.

As Andrew looks back on his journey with the Lord – celebrating forty five years of knowing Him intimately and experiencing the revelation of His unconditional love (which ultimately birthed his ministry) and thirty five years of the incorporation of AWM – he can be confident that he’s used every possible avenue to spread God’s Word. He’s taken the grace and faith message that the Lord has given him literally to the ends of the earth, through the vehicles of radio, television, live seminars, the internet, cassette tapes and CDs, videos, and an array of printed materials.

When Andrew looks forward into the future of AWM, what he has the greatest hope and the biggest vision for is the one thing that he always told himself he would never have; a Bible college. Andrew will be the first to admit that he never liked the idea of starting a Bible college. In fact, it wasn’t until God showed him how to develop a college using the current CBC model of classroom training combined with practical experience that he ever entertained the idea of having his own.

“I knew that the Lord wanted me to make disciples, not just converts,” recalls Andrew. “After God showed me His way of doing Bible college, I knew this was His avenue for discipleship.”

Charis Bible College opened its doors in the Autumn of 1994, and the rest, as they say, is history. Now in its nineteenth year, CBC has grown to thirty four schools, with an additional five or six to be added during 2013. CBCs dot the globe, with schools in Central and South America, Africa, Asia, Europe, and of course, the United States.

As Andrew looks to the future, he ultimately sees hundreds of CBCs all over the world. “In the long term, the Bible colleges are what’s going to make the biggest difference in reaching people. The new CBC campus currently under construction will lay the groundwork for us to reach tens of thousands of people.” (See “Building ‘The Barn’” on page 22 for details of the new campus.)

“At this point in my life,” continues Andrew, “I’d rather teach people how to pray than to pray for them. Through the Bible colleges, I can do just that. I know that my teachings on television and on CDs touch people, but in some cases, it may just be for a short time. What really changes people are the Bible colleges because they produce disciples.”

Currently there are over 3,000 CBC students worldwide, including those who are studying through the correspondence courses. There are more people involved in the extension schools than there are in the CBC Colorado school, which presently has 577 students.

“My vision,” says Andrew, “is to have our Colorado school grow to at least 3,000 students, which can’t happen until we have a larger facility. If we keep the same ratio of Colorado to worldwide students as we have now, that would mean there would be about 15,000 students in our extension schools.”

When asked what time frame he projects for such growth, he replied, “I’m turning sixty four this year, so it needs to be soon!”

Andrew also envisions having central hubs in different parts of the world to support the various extension schools. “All of our other schools are dependent on our Colorado school. This is where we make our videos and other materials to distribute to the colleges and this is where we have our annual directors’ meeting and other centralised programmes. It will eventually be important to have hubs in other places as well.” The next potential hub may be in Russia, where CBC leaders have a vision to start 1,000 new schools within five years!

Aside from the colleges, television is another vehicle Andrew is looking to expand. After adding a daily show to TBN a while back, a second broadcast was added to DayStar in 2012. This broadcast was aired in the afternoon, which was a new market for AWM, as all of its previous programming slots were in the morning or evening.

“We now want to add broadcasts in the evening, in order to pull in a totally different audience,” explains

Andrew. “Right now, our broadcasts cover the US, and 3.2 billion people around the world have access to our program. We’re looking to just add additional broadcasts at this point, not necessarily new networks.”

One change that Andrew’s followers will see at the start of this year is the structure and quantity of Gospel Truth Seminars. For years, he and a small staff, days, so it makes sense to do the shorter rallies,” says Andrew. “It saves us money on travel expenses, and we don’t need to take as many people with us, so they’re not being pulled away from their jobs at the ministry.”

In general, Andrew would like to eventually see a decreased travel schedule in his future. When he travels overseas, he prefers to hold meetings back to back so that he can return home sooner. But that often means little sleep on the road and a longer recovery time once he gets home.

When asked about upcoming short and long-term goals for the ministry, Andrew admits to not having specific goals: “God has never given me goals per se. I do best when I just maintain my relationship with Him and listen for His leading. He tells me what to do one step at a time, and that’s what I do. I’ve never set goals for myself. It’s not until after I get involved with something, like the Bible college or television, that I can actually see what’s going on and what God wants to do with it. I rarely know what’s happening ahead of time. I just try to be obedient to what I hear from God.”

After thirty five successful years of ministry, that strategy seems to be working quite well. And it’s probably good advice for all of us. As Andrew states, “There’s a lot less stress to life this way. If you just seek the Lord, I can guarantee you will be better off in the future than you are now. He will make everything work out.” GT

Your gifts are changing lives!

In May of 2012 I sent a request for prayer for Mary Cheboiwo from Kitale Kenya. My husband and I are missionaries there for Messengers International. Mary is a student in our bible school life application class. When I e-mailed you for prayer Mary was critical and had been sent home to die. She had aides, a blood clot in the brain, she had a mass in the stomach inoperable because she was haemorrhaging both through the nose and rectally. Mary started out with Malaria that went into a domino affect to many diseases...she had tuberculosis and had seizures throughout the day and night. She lost weight until she was unrecognizable. She had nurses 24/7 for 6 months and many blood transfusions throughout.

I called your prayer line when all hope had been given up...except for Mary herself who kept whispering "Jesus Is Lord." Within days of calling you Mary began to get better...little by little. In three weeks time Mary walked into my classroom. Within another two weeks Mary was completely healed and graduated with her class in December 2012. She Pastors a small church...it is our prayer House in Kitale. She has an amazing testimony and we thank you for your intervention of prayer.

In Christ,
P Cornell, VFA Ministries Kitale, Kenya

We just want to say how much we thank God for you and Jamie's faithfulness to press through all these years, and alleluia, what a harvest that has, is, and continues to come in through your awesome teaching! We were so blessed to be with you last week. The healing I received with my hearing and neck! PRAISE THE LORD! What a great time in the Word and with other believers. We share Jesus everywhere we go and what a great life now that we know and continue to grow and know who we are in Christ! Forgiven, redeemed, healed, delivered, set free, rich, prosperous! AMEN! Just like you say, "This GOOD NEWS will put a shout in a corpse!" Thank you again, and we look forward to coming to Colorado Springs very soon. We give infinite worship, thanks, praise, honour, and glory with charity to God for all He has, is, and continues to do in our lives.

God's continued Favour and Blessings unto you all moment by moment! Agape always.

ANDREW WOMMACK MINISTRIES – EUROPE WELCOMES

David Illingworth

Pure gold streams of water poured from a waterfall, emptying into a serene, shimmering gold pool. As David Illingworth gazed upon the beauty of the scene, he sensed the Lord beckoning him to stand in the pool under the golden waterfall. David obeyed and as he did, the gold water was absorbed into every fibre of his being. At that moment, he realised he wasn't standing under a waterfall made of water but, rather, of God's pure, unconditional love.

After receiving this life-changing vision in 2009, David knew without a doubt that God was calling him into kingdom service and out of the corporate world he had known his entire life. "At first I didn't know what God was calling me to do," says David. "I just felt compelled to learn more about God and His love."

A year prior, David was exposed to Andrew Wommack Ministries – Europe (AWME) when a friend was diagnosed with cancer. David was given Andrew's teaching God Wants You Well, and it completely changed the way he thought about and prayed for healing. Andrew taught God's Word in a way that David had never heard before, and he wanted to hear more. In the Autumn of 2009, he enrolled in the Charis Bible College (CBC) correspondence course from his home in England.

After devouring the lessons, David was ready to move to Walsall and begin his second year at CBC. His wife, Lesley, wasn't thrilled with the idea at first. But God spoke to her heart, and the Illingworths were off to Walsall. After graduating in 2011, David and Lesley decided to return for a third year.

"During my second year, God told me He wanted me to get to know Him. But during my third year, He said He needed me to get to know myself," recalls David. By the end of David's third year, God's love had given him an unshakable hope, solidifying his faith and enabling him to minister in God's grace. "I grew to understand who I am in God's love, which has released peace into my heart," explains David.

After their third year at CBC, the Illingworths didn't know where to go next. "I had no plans and no open doors," says David. "God just kept telling me to wait." With his vast business background in sales, management, and organisational consulting, along with his global experiences from travelling to over seventy five countries, there were numerous paths in the natural he could have pursued, but instead of pushing doors open, he simply waited on God. The payoff came in the form of a phone call.

“I received a call one day informing me that I was being considered as the new CEO of AWME,” recalls David. “As I thought about it, I realised the position perfectly fulfilled all that God had shown me and prepared me for over the years.”

In September 2012, David took the helm at AWME, taking over from Will Graham who had stepped down after serving as CEO since 2005. Under Will’s leadership, teaching materials have been translated into many European, African, and Asian languages, and Walsall became home for AWME and CBC West Midlands, however Will’s heart was primarily that of a pastor, and in May 2012, the opportunity arose for him to return as a full-time pastor to a growing church.

Now that David is on board, he hopes to concentrate on developing relationships within the surrounding communities as well as nearby churches. “Many of the churches in the area see us as undermining their authority. We’re working on building trust by partnering with them to serve those in our cities,” says David. He’s confident that once those in Walsall and beyond taste God’s love through these relationships, they will want to be a part of what AWME has to offer.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Mark and Charla Eastwood

Mark and Charla Eastwood met in rural Kansas in 1990, and both truly believed they were born again, but when they realised that neither of their lives showed any visible fruit of the peace and joy that Jesus has promised to those who follow Him, they knew something wasn't right.

As they sought the Lord, He led them to watch Kenneth Copeland's television program, where they heard truths of God's Word that they had never before been taught. Once they got a glimpse of all God had for them, they became immersed in learning more of His Word and His ways: "We learned about divine healing, which we knew nothing about," says Mark. "I prayed for Charla, and the sinus headaches she'd been plagued with almost daily for more than two decades were gone, never to return. We were off and running!"

After several years of walking with the Lord in a Spirit-led relationship, God put it on their hearts to attend Bible college. They had no idea of where to even begin searching for a Bible college, but God did. God led Mark into a conversation on his construction job site one day, and he was given a cassette tape of one of Andrew's teachings.

After learning more about Andrew and his ministry, they also discovered that he had a Bible college. At the time, Charis Bible College (CBC) Colorado was Andrew's only college, so the Eastwoods began their studies via the correspondence program. After finishing their first year at CBC, they relocated to Colorado Springs to complete the second-year program.

At CBC, the Eastwoods learned about God's grace and love, how to live victorious Christian lives, and how to pray effectively, for themselves and for others. Charla recalls, "We were trained to minister. We volunteered on the prayer line, we effectively ministered discipleship, and even travelled to other countries to minister." In May of 2001, the Eastwoods became graduates of CBC Colorado.

Upon graduation, Mark and Charla returned to Kansas and began serving as prayer ministers at Gospel Truth Seminars around the country. "Using the training we had received at school, along with the opportunity for practical application, we were able to minister God's love and grace to hundreds, seeing signs, wonders, and miracles following," says Mark.

During this time, God arranged many divine appointments for the Eastwoods, and they began holding local Bible studies and meetings, where they taught the Discipleship Evangelism programme while ministering and praying for people. In 2011, God opened a door for them to intern with CBC Kansas City when the director, Cody Hull, relocated to Houston to start a new CBC. In March 2012, the Eastwoods were chosen to take the helm as directors at CBC Kansas City.

"The 2012-2013 school year has been an exciting one," says Charla. "The college relocated, we have all new classes for first year students, and we have hungry students who are learning and growing quickly. Our second year class has already been on a missions trip to Nicaragua, where they saw blind eyes opened and many physical ailments healed, along with salvations and baptisms in the Holy Spirit."

Mark and Charla have caught Andrew's vision of planting Charis Bible Colleges all over the world. They have seen firsthand how the message of God's goodness and grace that is taught at CBC is both life giving and life changing. As the new directors of CBC Kansas City, the Eastwoods have the opportunity to impact their home community, and ultimately the world in a bigger way than they ever thought possible – and it all started with a teaching tape that led them to CBC over ten years ago. GT
